
Contents

List of figures	vii
List of tables	ix
List of contributors	x
Acknowledgements	xv
1 Introduction: introducing international approaches to real estate development	1
GRAHAM SQUIRES AND ERWIN HEURKENS
2 United States: from small private market local entrepreneurs towards sophisticated enterprise	23
RICHARD PEISER AND DAVID HAMILTON
3 United Kingdom: growth, structure and priorities of the UK real estate development industry: the longstanding division between commercial and residential developers	46
DAVID ADAMS
4 Netherlands: a search for alternative public-private development strategies from neighbouring countries	66
ERWIN VAN DER KRABBen AND ERWIN HEURKENS
5 Hungary: the case of post-socialist urban planning in Budapest	82
PAL BAROSS, ÁRON HORVÁTH AND GÁBOR SOÓKI-TÓTH
6 Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, United Arab Emirates and Qatar: Middle Eastern complexity and contradiction	101
SAMER BAGAEEN
7 Ghana: impact of land use planning on real estate development return in a developing world context	123
KWASI GYAU BAFFOUR AWUAH, FELIX HAMMOND, JESSICA LAMOND AND COLIN BOOTH

8 Chile: Latino gentrification from the Santiago ‘city-heights’	137
JORGE INZULZA-CONTARDO
9 India: real estate development in the fastest growing free market democracy	150
RICHARD REED
10 China: from a planned welfare-based public housing system to a market-oriented real estate industry	167
JEAN JINGHAN CHEN AND RUIHUI LIN
11 Hong Kong: the speculative rather than technical real estate property market process	185
PAUL H.K. HO
12 Australia: dark and light through a looking glass	200
EDDO COIACETTO
13 Conclusion: concluding international approaches to real estate development	218
GRAHAM SQUIRES AND ERWIN HEURKENS
Index	231